

TOGETHER, WE CREATE OUR FUTURE

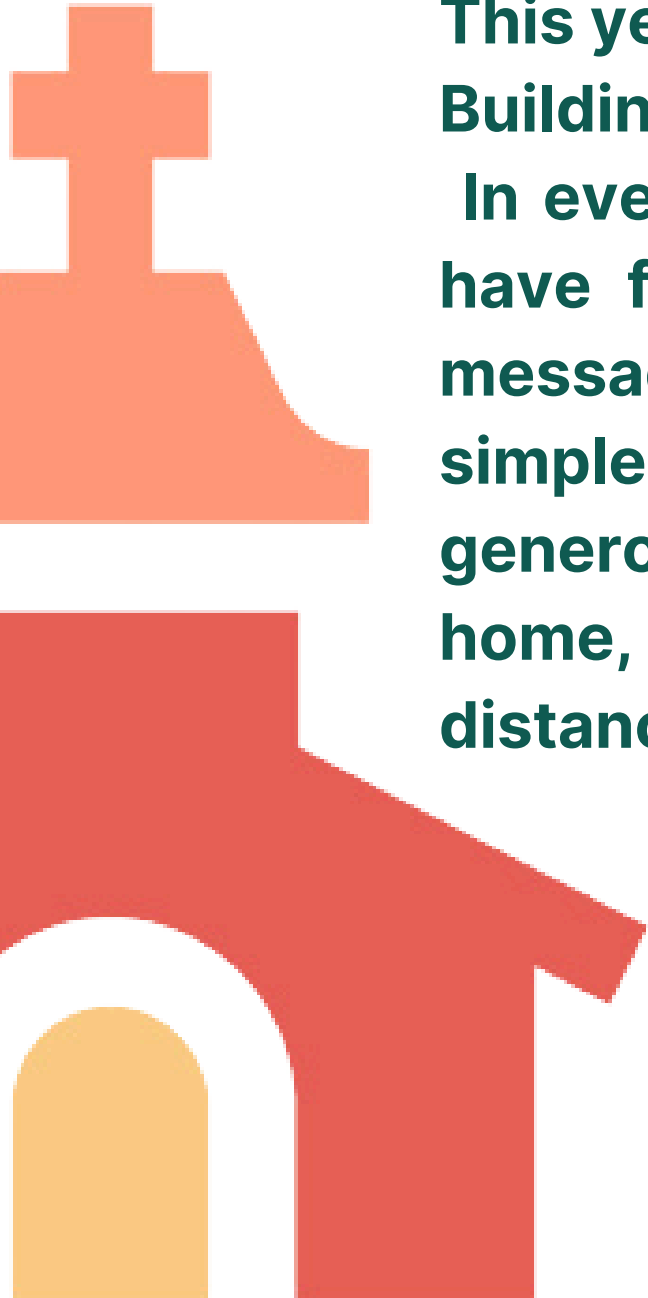

This year, in response to Laudato Si', I worked toward the following to create a more sustainable world:

Designing Educational Plans:

For the past three years, I have been creating educational action plans to inspire my students to care for our common home. Each month, we engage in activities such as reflecting on environmental justice, exploring alternatives for ethical economies, and writing personal commitments to integral ecology.

Building Mini-Families of Hope through Laudato Si'
In every country where I have lived and worked, I have formed "mini-families" by sending personal messages of love, hope, and care. Through these simple communications, I promote small acts of generosity, solidarity, and respect for our common home, strengthening human bonds that transcend distances.

TOGETHER, WE CREATE OUR FUTURE

This year, in response to Laudato Si', I worked toward the following to create a more sustainable world:

Transforming Personal Habits:

I have integrated changes into my daily life inspired by Laudato Si', such as more conscious consumption, reducing plastic use, and cultivating a grateful and responsible outlook toward people and the environment.

LAUDATO SI'
Action Platform

This year, I worked to plant small seeds of change — in my students, in my communities, and within myself. It was not always easy to stay hopeful or consistent, but I discovered that true transformation begins with small, faithful acts. Laudato Si' reminded me that caring for the Earth is a journey of love, connection, and daily renewal.
